Fresno County Public Library Hosts Community Discussion

The Fresno County Public Library (FCPL) will host a second Community Discussion regarding the new Clovis Regional Library at the Clovis Police Station Meeting Room Thursday, February 15th from 6:00 to 7:30 PM. The address of the meeting is 1233 Fifth Street, Clovis.

The purpose of this meeting is for the public to share what they would like to see in their new Clovis Regional Library. The new library is a joint project with the City of Clovis known as the Landmark Commons. The new library will be located alongside the Senior Center and the transit hub.

“Your input is very valuable to the Fresno County Public Library; this is why we are having these meetings. We want to hear what you have to say,” said County Librarian Kelley Landano.

Library staff will be on hand to listen and receive input from the public on ideas and suggestions for the new library. This is an opportunity for the community to share their needs for their public library which will be used for many generations to come.

For additional information about this meeting, please contact FCPL’s Public Information Officer, Rocky Vang at (559) 600-6274 or (559) 970-1135.
