Fresno County Public Libraries Open for Walk-in Services

The Fresno County Public Library (Library) is pleased to announce that all Library branches throughout the county are open for walk-in services. While doors have been open since November, the Library can now provide services at pre-pandemic hours of operation.

At all Library branches, you can browse and check out books, access computers and printers, and stay as long you like with no time restrictions. Some Library branches have meeting rooms and study rooms available. Please call your local branch to learn how to reserve these rooms.

As always, Library services are available online as well. You can check out electronic books and browse an extensive collection of online resources.

"Throughout the past sixteen months, we have been grateful to be able to serve Fresno County residents. Whether walk-in, curbside, or online, we have been proud to help our community through this unsettled time. We are looking forward to returning to our version of normal. We hope our community members stop in to see us soon if they haven't already." - County Librarian, Raman Bath
